‘Most people from 1945 onwards would have expected nuclear weapons to be used in warfare reasonably soon after that, yet almost 60 years of Cold War passed without the use of nuclear weapons. If it hadn’t been for the lessons both the East and the West learned from Hiroshima, I don’t think that would have happened.’

Extract from Susan's Story: Nuremberg, 1938

Schooldays in Nazi Germany

Hitler came to power in 1933, an event which had very little effect on the 10-year old, happy and carefree little girl I was then. We lived in Nuremberg, my life was warm and comfortable, and the events of Kristallnacht were still many years in the future.

I quite enjoyed school, we took lots of good holidays and we had lots of friends and relatives, who visited regularly. For a time, my life continued much as before. I did notice that the grown-ups around me were worried, but very little was discussed in front of the children. Our lives were to continue normally if possible. We were warned not to speak about the National Socialists, Nazis, or how they were discussed at home ...

However, gradually various problems arose. A difference was made between Aryan and non-Aryan children. The non-Aryan – Jewish – children were told one day to sit at the back of the class and from then on Jewish children were not allowed to join Latin lessons.

In the Hitler Youth, apart from singing and parading, they were taught all kinds of anti-Semitic things and started to hate their old friends ... Gradually, only the Jewish girls were my friends. "Jew Stinker" was often shouted at us ... In class we were in effect told that we were not allowed to have good marks.

... During the summer of 1938, we were told that all Jewish children had to be educated at Jewish schools. I therefore had to go to a new school, which was in Fuerth, a town attached to Nuremberg – only a road sign showed where one town ended and the other began. I started there in the autumn term, and because emigration became an obvious necessity, even to the most optimistic Jews, I also started short courses in cooking and sewing, to enable me, if necessary, to earn a living in another country. I took these courses for a very short time only, because then came the dreadful 9th November, when my life changed dramatically.

Extracts from a report on Goebbels' speech about the book burnings, Völkischer Beobachter, 12 May 1933

The German Students' Association of the Berlin universities assembled yesterday at the Hegelplatz and then, taking along several truckloads of 25,000 books and writings undermining the spirit of the German people, marched to the Opernplatz where they, in a symbolic action, threw these Un-German writings into the flames ...

Then Reichsminister Dr. Goebbels spoke: "The era of extreme Jewish intellectualism has come to an end and the German revolution has again opened the way for the true essence of being German ... Barriers that separated us are torn down. Volk* has reunited with Volk. And if old people do not understand this – we young ones have already completed the process ... As we did so often, while we were still fighting in the opposition, now that we hold the power, and with it the responsibility, we join together in the vow that we previously so often promised to the nightly sky: 'Illuminated by many flames let it be an oath! The Reich and the nation and our Führer Adolf Hitler – Heil.'"
